

I support satellite radio and the programming that it offers and resent the attempts by local broadcasters to limit my choices. My XM Radio allows me to select the programming I want to hear, where I want to hear it, without commercial interruption. Added local services make my subscription more valuable and provides me with a simple method for determining weather and traffic. I can get that information from local broadcasters, but only when they want to provide it to me -- with XM Radio I can get it when I need and want it. I strongly object to the broadcasters blatant attempt to stifle competition. The airwaves belong to us all -- and the FCC is supposed to protect us. I chose to pay for satellite radio and should not be hampered.
